The fruit and vegetable growing capabilities of Rugby, and the Plateau generally, are well known and satisfactorily established. The object of this Company is to set up machinery, etc., in Rugby, for the canning of these products, and to ship them in the most compact and profitable form.

The abundant production of tomatoes, and the excellence of their quality, has determined the promoters, after careful consideration, to begin the enterprise upon them principally. These considerations lead them to the conviction that they can turn out, at current prices, an article superior to any now on the market. They hope to add corn, beans, strawberries, apples, peaches, etc., as they progress. The Company has secured a complete can making and processing plant, which is now on the ground, and will shortly be erected. The amount of capital already subscribed is $3,000.

Application for shares to be made to

C. H. BLACKLOCK, Sec., RUGBY, TENN.

PARTNER WANTED,

With $2,500 capital, to join advertiser in establishing a POTTERY MANUFACTORY at or near Sedgewood, Tenn. Good beds of superior clay, well adapted for the purpose, are found there. The advertiser has himself practically tested the clay, and has also had them tested in England, the result of which is highly satisfactory, as also is the report which he received back with the tests. On account of proximity to the coal and other advantages, the business can be conducted at much less expense than probably any other establishment in the States. FINE GROCERIES, Chosen with the idea of supplying, at the lowest Cash Prices, the best articles.

The late fine rains and warm sun-rays have beaten upon the farms and fields of the Plateau till the crops bid fair to eclipse all others of a generation past. The late frosts have done no harm. Never were the ranges and woods in better condition; the grass is most luxuriant, and the cattle upon our thousand hills will fatten and go into the markets, and show to all how well adapted is the Cumberland Plateau to beef culture. With such a large field as is presented by the ranges of the Plateau it is a little singular there are not a hundred herds feeding where only one now browses. We have been buried, however, for generations, in our own luxuriance; Nature had no help meet for her until Art and Science in the railroad made a way into the undeveloped wealth of the Cumberlands. The stagnant agricultural blood of the mountaineer required a tonic—the circulatory system was out of order. New styles, new machinery, new ideas were required, and the railroad brought and is bringing them; and will go on in the work till the plains and valleys of this capable section are dotted with flocks and herds, and the great Plateau of East Tennessee vies with Texas in its cattle production.

Now is the time for home-seekers to come and see this section of country. Everything is at its best; the fields and gardens are showing what can be done and produced, and the climate, unequalled anywhere, is such that outdoor work and exercise are always possible and agreeable. We have no sultriness by night or day; gentle rains constantly invigorate us and give that health and energy for farm and forest work that the man on the hot and treeless prairie would indeed be thankful for. We have no malaria, no ague, no fever; but a high, fine, dry air and soil, with abundance of cool springs and streams, are our portion. All we want is more to share and enjoy our land and climate with us. If we have not the rich soil of river bottoms and deep valleys, we have the air and health and consequent energy of the high lands, and health is wealth.

Allardt is quietly but very surely making good progress, and just now is about the most progressive of the new settlements along the line of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad. The men at the helm thoroughly know their business, and the kind of men wanted in a new country. They do not stand with folded arms waiting for customers, they appoint live agents along the emigration streams, both in this country and in Europe. They also bring down men—practical men—to view and see the soil and lands, fearing little what the report will be. All this energy is well rewarded by the coming in of men who know what they are going to do, and how to do it, and it will not be long before Allardt is widely known as an industrious, prosperous and beautiful settlement.

The remains of the man who so sweetly sang of "Home, Sweet Home," and was himself a wanderer upon the face of the earth, have at last been brought home from a generation's rest on the African shore of the Mediterranean, to lie amid the dead of his countrymen. Last Saturday, June 9th, the anniversary of his birth, the remains of John Howard Payne were laid, with much imposing ceremony, and in the presence of the President of the United States and many distinguished persons, in Oak Hill Cemetery, Washington.

One of the most encouraging signs in the growth of Tennessee is the increasing interest in the improvement of country roads. This means that the value of lands will be increased and that commerce in the rural districts will not be hindered half the year by highways in the mud. This year a class in road-making is to be organized in Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, and county Road Commissioners will be allowed the benefit of the instruction given without charge.—Louisville Commercial.

The House of Lords, the other day, voted by a small majority in favor of marriage with a deceased wife's sister, three members of the Royal Family supporting the bill. The House of Commons has not gone so far yet, preferring, perhaps, to run the risk of a change of mothers-in-law; whereas the Lords may say it is "better to bear the ills we have than fly to others that we know not of."

Now if we can get some capital invested in small enterprises, and make our own buckets and tubs and washboards and ax-handles and hames and plow handles and hubs and axes and spokes and horseshoes and trace-chains and hatchets and hammers and window glass and ink and soda starch and baking powders, and a thousand other little things that we buy and use every day, we will be all right. We want more variegated industry.—Atlanta Constitution.

There is something the matter with Queen Victoria, what, we don't know; we have had no particulars direct from Windsor, or wherever the August Lady may be. Some of the Eastern papers, however, profess to know that she will shortly abdicate, that her health is very feeble, and her mind so depressed, death or imbecility cannot be far off. We have a modified respect for the Prince of Wales, but from our hearts would say, "God save the Queen."

The pugilistic generals of the Republicans and the Democrats, scenting battle afar off, are routing up their armour for fresh contests, and again sharpening their weapons for new fights in old fields, while the great rank and file of both parties listen and look on until the final hour arrives when they will be called in to decide the contest. The fall elections, with an eve to the highest places in the governmental departments, must this year be of exceptional interest, and will assure exceptional energy. As with the wicked, there is no peace to the active politician, he is ever full of intrigue and anxiety. The only peace that will satisfy him is the largest piece of patronage he can obtain.

General Crook is safe, no disaster has befallen his arms; the disaster is all on the other side. The gallant soldier returns from out the wilderness and the darkness which hid him, and into which the country was peering for information, with close upon four hundred Indian prisoners, and without losing one of his own soldiers.

There was a little rough fighting in one of the roughest fastnesses of the fierce Apaches, and a village, the stronghold of the Chiricahuas, in the language of Gen. Crook, "was wiped out." A large amount of plunder taken by the Indians in their raids was recovered, consisting of one hundred ponies and mules, forty laden with saddles, bridles, cloths, gold and silver watches, and several thousand dollars in gold and silver and greenbacks.
